Science Alive Show – Celebrating National Science Week 2019

During National Science Week, our students' learning was supported by a fun and lively Chemical Sciences Show presented by Mick Doyle from Science Alive. Science Alive shows are informative, educational and are directly related to the Australian Curriculum and to Primary Science Teaching programs. Mick discussed the properties of a variety of materials. He also demonstrated physical and chemical changes of materials. The students enjoyed Mick's steam engine and air pressure experiments.

Interschool Cross Country

The Interschool Cross Country Carnival was represented by 48 student competitors. Congratulations to all participants for demonstrating a high level of ability, endurance and most importantly sportsmanship throughout the day. Carine PS placed 5th overall from the 8 schools in attendance.

A very special mention to:

Lacey Jenkins Yr 3 - 1st place

William Hogg Yr 4 - 3rd place

David McAlinden Yr 6 - 1st place and broke the record for the Yr 6 boys 2km race.

Thank you also to all the staff, students and especially the parent volunteers who transported and set up the tents for the team. It was a wonderful day! We now look forward to our school athletics carnivals on 3 and 4 September with all parents and family members welcome to attend.

Interschool Lightning Carnival

The Interschool Lightning Carnival held at the Kingsway Sporting Complex was a great day of competition and comradery for the eight primary schools involved. Carine PS students were outstanding ambassadors demonstrating a high degree of competition and sportsmanship in the six teams of AFL, soccer, netball and volleyball. The Carine netball B team and volleyball A team were both undefeated throughout the competition, winning the first place pennant in their respective sports.

Thank you to all the spectators, coaches, managers and umpires, your support was invaluable throughout the day and during Term 2 Interschool Winter Sporting fixtures.

Transition from Primary to Secondary School

Professor Matt Sanders is founder of the Triple P – Positive Parenting Program®

For more information go to www.triplep-parenting.net or Contact the School Psychologist Luciana Carelli

The move from primary to secondary school can be a big scary step for many kids (and parents). It marks the transition from childhood to adolescence, and heralds the teenage years.

While some children might be excited about going to secondary school, it's common for them to also feel apprehensive. The unknown can be daunting – things like a new and bigger school, new teachers and new friends can play on kids' minds. It's important to be aware of what they might be worried about so you can talk about it and, together, come up with solutions or ways to cope.

As a parent it's totally normal to feel the same excitement or apprehension as your child. But it won't take long for your child to adjust and you'll wonder what you were ever worried about. But as a rule of thumb – kids are less anxious about big changes when their parents are confident in their kid's ability to rise to the occasion. So if you seem calm and confident in them they will pick up on that.

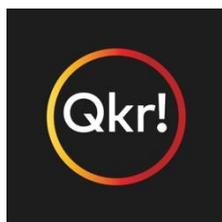

You can help make the transition easier by being involved in the preparations but give them space once they are there. Take an interest in your child's day, and find out about the school's standards and expectations for things like homework and uniforms. But don't do everything for them.

One thing kids should have a legitimate say in is choosing their subjects. Encourage subjects that interest them or will help them on their desired career path. However, if you are really worried about their choices you can seek advice from teachers about what might be best. And if you haven't already, it's important to establish a good homework routine. A good example is: come home from school, have an afternoon snack, and then do homework (before playing or watching TV). At the same time, it's good for kids to have a school-life balance that includes things like sport, music and arts. Everyone will be happier for it.

Parenting Tip: If your child has an older sibling at the school that older sibling will have protective instincts. But it's important for the younger sibling to learn to stand on their own feet. Only ask older siblings to keep an eye out for younger siblings if you think something is wrong.

Dhruvi will go on to compete with the winners from other districts and we wish her all the best. The speech she prepared was on 'Climate Change' and it was her connection with the audience that really shone, in addition of course, to her excellent research. Well done Dhruvi.
